CEZAR STANCIU*

ROMANIA AND THE SINO-YUGOSLAV RELATIONS
(Summary)

Keywords: Romania, Yugoslavia, China, Soviet Union, revisionism, domination, world Communism.

Following Stalin’s death, the forces which opposed Moscow’s control over the world Communist movement multiplied but they were rarely united. Ideological differences separated most of the parties engaged in challenging Soviet control, as was the case with the Yugoslavs and the Chinese. The Romanians, on the other hand, understood that success in such an endeavor was conditioned by unity and solidarity which is why the Romanian Communist Party cultivated close relations with most forces which opposed Soviet domination and even tried to facilitate their rapprochement when circumstances permitted. This article describes the Romanian view on Sino-Yugoslav relations revealing how important it was for Romania to contribute to the reconciliation of the two parties previously separated by ideological disagreements.

* Asistent universitar, Universitatea Valahia, Târgoviște.